President's Message

Dear Friends,

It's that time of year, the end of our fiscal year when we celebrate our Founders and our wonderful volunteers. Please sign up early for our annual luncheon to be held on Saturday, June 25th. Our speaker will be Mia Rook, the Education Director for the Texas Historical Commission at the Landmark Inn Historical site in Castroville, TX. She will be speaking on "The Military Men of Castroville", which will discuss the men who lived in Castroville and served in wars ranging from the Civil War to WWII and how Castroville as a town was a part of the efforts for those wars. There will also be some interesting door prizes this year!

Please RSVP for the Luncheon by June 15th! With four choices on the menu, there ought to be something to tempt your appetite! Birthday cake for dessert! Please see the flyer elsewhere in the newsletter.

We are delighted to have reached that nice round number of 500 members! However, for various reasons, we have had a drop in duty librarian volunteers. We need more to avoid overusing our current volunteers. Training is provided and volunteering is a fabulous way to learn the treasures in our library. When we have enough volunteers, one duty day per month is all that is required. (The internet has provided me with many happy dances, but I have had more from the books and periodicals in our library! It is NOT all on the internet!) Without an increase in volunteers, we will have to take a serious look at shortening the hours we are open, something we have not had to do in years. Won't you please help?

We are planning an open house/orientation for members, new and old, for some time in August, with librarian assistance to help you discover treasures in every room. We will topped this off with refreshments in the Dwyer Center. Additional details on this after the next board meeting.

SAGHS Wants You!

1st VP: To obtain speakers for our General Membership Meetings, Plan for the Founders Day Luncheon & Seminar.

Duty Librarians: To keep our doors open and assist our members.

Our Heritage* Editor: Coordinate and collaborate with authors to produce the Journal.

Project Manager for the Bexar County Paupers Book: This proposed book has been in the works for the last couple of year. The previous manager had to resign due to personal issues. Editorial Note:

Changes to our Newsletter
Beginning with the next Newsletter (August 2022 issue), our publication date will be on the 10th of the month (August, September, October, November, January, February, March, April, May and June). We hope this change will enable us to bring updated information about our Membership Meetings, Annual Seminar and Founders' Day Luncheon.

Additionally we hope to host two columns with Member input in the following categories:

- A treasure found in our SAGHS Library.

  This would include a brief description of how a particular item found in our Library aided in your research.
- Technology Tidbits

  Short articles from personal knowledge, or derived from other resources to help keep us up-to-date on changing technology, scams, hacks etc.; and how to cope with it all.

If you would like to submit information on either of these topics, please send to Publications@txsaghs.org and in the subject line type "Newsletter". Thanks.

Class Suggestion Survey

It is that time of year to hear from the SAGHS membership about their suggestions for the 2023 classes and workshops. Attached to this newsletter is a listing of "2023 Suggestions for Classes/Workshops" for you to complete and return to the Library. This may be done by either emailing the attached or leaving it at the Library. There is also space to add additional programs not previously listed plus a line to volunteer to teach a class. Your assistance is greatly appreciated and the results will be addressed to finalize the 2023 program at the September Education Committee Meeting.

The bid for high-density shelving for the Reference Room came in at a much higher than expected and did not receive board approval to proceed at this time. I for one don't see the price on anything dropping any time soon, but our Facilities Mgr. Kurt Kneeland will continue to look for other solutions.

A Facilities Use Agreement with price list has been developed to allow members in good standing to use the Dwyer Center for their personal get-togethers, or for meetings of organizations they represent. The forms are available and are self-explanatory. For details, see your President. Thanks to the committee that hammered out the details; Steve Mabie, Barbara Holmes, Nancy McNamara, Rob Lewis and Kurt Kneeland.

County Court Records: Court Minute and Order Books

Matters brought before county courts are recorded by clerks in different ways in different counties and states. Typically county clerks used minute books to record a short entry and order books for a longer synopsis of the day-to-day occurrences in county courts. Minute books usually recorded the month and year of the events, such as "October Term 1840," but if you carefully page through the records you may find the exact day of each session of the term. Officers of the court are listed and the beginning and the meeting place of the court, often at someone's house. When you find a filing of interest you should follow it until it is resolved to be sure you understand its full meaning. Counties may have one or both kinds of books for separate courts, such as probate minute books or chancery order books. There are many types of events recorded, from civil and more minor criminal cases to manumission of slaves, appointment of officials, tax matters, and licenses for taverns and mills. Below is a sampling of record types. Many have been digitized and are easy to access at Family Search or Ancestry, but to get the most use out of these records, find out what records live at your county clerk's office and local and state archives and then plan to explore them. There's nothing like looking at the originals. It's time to get out on the road again!

Why research these records?

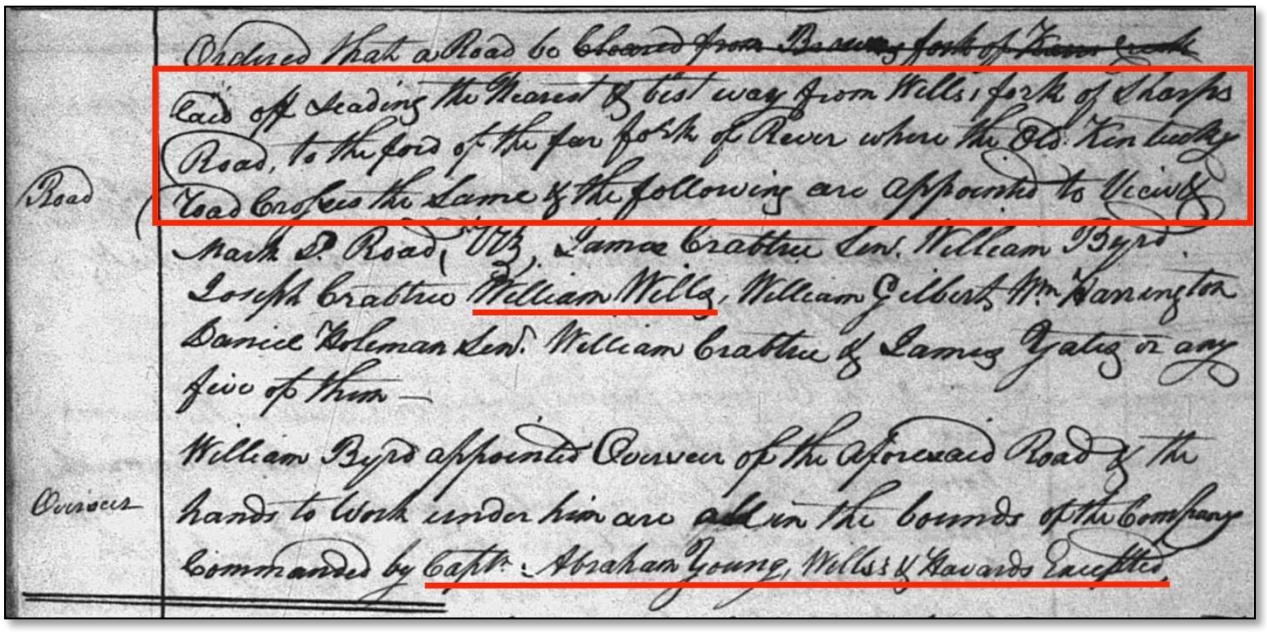

Trace the movements of an ancestor.
Finding the earliest mention of an ancestor in a particular place can be helpful to establish his identify and movements. On 17 October 1796, William Wills was ordered to lay out a road with other named individuals. A description of where the intended road was to be located is included in the minutes—"… leading the nearest and best way from Wills' fork of Sharps Road, to the ford of the far fork of River where the Old Kentucky road crosses the same … ."[1] This information will be useful in understanding when William came to the county, in what part of the county he lived, and in locating deeds and tax records. Also noting the people who were appointed with him may give you clues to neighbors who may have migrated to the county with him from another area. Look at all the pages during your ancestor's purported lifetime to see in what other actions he participated.

Directly after this entry is another one appointing an overseer for a new road. Hands that will work the road are identified as well. In this case they are to come from the local militia units commanded by Captains Abraham Young, Wills & Havards E_____. Apparently, the above-named William Wills held the rank of captain in the local group.

"During Tennessee's first years, the militia was useful as a support mechanism for Tennessee's bureaucratic processes. It was the framework by which men paid taxes and voted. Militiamen also built roads."[2] The hands were neighbors who had a vested interest in keeping up the roads in the area. Knowing their names will help you place your ancestor on the map. Correlate these names with those in deed books, censuses, and tax records to pinpoint residences and ensure same-named individuals aren't confused.

Find an ancestor's death date before civil registration.
On 10 June 1833, the executors of Samuel Watson's estate presented his will in the McCracken County, Kentucky court.[3] Civil registration in Kentucky began in 1911 so this may be the only evidence of his death.[4] If the will books are extant then you may find a copy of his will there, but if not, this is direct evidence that he died close to this date. Carefully examine the other names listed, such as the subscribing witnesses to his will and the securities for the bond. They may be relatives, neighbors, or close associates and should be identified. The amount of the bond posted is significant and depended upon the estate's worth. This will give you an idea of your ancestor's economic standing in the community if you compare the amount to others in the county.

Determine maiden names and family relationships.
The document below lists a case between two couples: Benjamin Watson and wife Anne, formerly Anne Davis, and William P. Thomas and wife Sarah, formerly Sarah Davis.[5] The wives carry the same surname, and the case is over the estate of Walter Davis. Likely these are two sisters whose father is Walter Davis. However, more research is needed. This entry might be the only record giving the maiden names of these two women.

Find your ancestor in apprenticeship records.
Very often when a child became orphaned or the family came under difficult circumstances they were "bound out" to learn a trade so that they would not become a burden to the community. In the example below several detailed pieces of information are presented—the boy's full name, Joseph Payne Hall, and his age of 14 on 15 July 1809. The man who was to be his master was John Scott who was to teach him the "art of farming."[6] If Joseph or John are your target individuals look for other records of their relationship in apprenticeship bonds books if available in your county or state archives. Find the men in censuses to see how successful the apprenticeship turned out to be.

Ordered that Joseph Payne Hall, aged fourteen years the 18th day of July last be bound to John Scott, till he arrive to the age of Twenty one years to learn the art of a farmer and Mountaineer ipsum accordingly

North Carolina Apprenticeship Indenture 1809

Find African American individuals before Emancipation.
African American research can be quite challenging. In North Carolina "Pre-Civil War records consist of slave importation declarations, plantation records, emancipation records, apprenticeship bonds for freedmen, North Carolina hiring practices, census records, white family records, church and cemetery records, military records, vital records, and numerous North Carolina court records. African American vital records were usually recorded in separate books for many years."[7]

Below is evidence of a boy's full name and birthdate, something seldom found in county records for an African American child. Knowing where your slave or freedman ancestor lived and where to look for records is key. This young boy of color named Harvey Turner was four on 25 February 1809. He was to be indentured until he reached the age of 21. He was bound to Michael V. Brown with Malar Stacey providing the security.[8] Research all three individuals to learn the fate of Harvey.

Ordered that Harvey Turner a boy of Coulor of the age of four years the 25th of February last be bound to William V. Brown till he arrive to the age of Twenty one years to learn the art of a farmer and Mountaineer ipsum accordingly - at the same time he entered into bond with Malar Stacey Security in the sum of Two Hundred and fifty pounds for the safe keeping and delivering of said Apprentice agreable to act of Gen.l Assembly -

Minute and order books are great sources of information about our ancestors. Taking the time to page through them can provide context and perspective and undoubtedly enrich our understanding of their lives.
